With a Bachelor's degree in a modern language, you can use your language skills and cultural knowledge for careers in education, foreign service, international business, communications technology, medicine, law, travel and tourism, translation, and interpretation. It is advisable to take a double major, a minor, or a concentration in a professional field where knowing a foreign language is a benefit. One's qualifications in almost all professions are enhanced by foreign language skills.

Roanoke College encourages all students to gain international experience by studying abroad and offers a wide range of study abroad opportunities. Internships in the target language are encouraged also and are available locally and abroad, often in conjunction with study away.
